Instructions: Choose the appropriate paragraph based on the customer’s scope, and delete the others.

ISO/IEC 17067, Conformity assessment - Fundamentals of product certification and guidelines for product certification schemes, scheme type 1b most closely resembles the product certification scheme operated by this organization. This scheme type involves the certification of a whole batch of products, following selection and determination as specified in the scheme. The proportion to be tested, which can include testing of all the units in the batch (100% testing), would be based, for example, on the homogeneity of the items in the batch and the application of a sampling plan, where appropriate. If the outcome of the determination, review and decision is positive, all items in the batch may be described as certified and may have a mark of conformity affixed, if that is included in the scheme.

ISO/IEC 17067, Conformity assessment - Fundamentals of product certification and guidelines for product certification schemes, scheme type 3 most closely resembles the product certification scheme operated by this organization. The surveillance part of this scheme involves periodically taking samples of the product from the point of production and subjecting them to determination activities to check that items produced subsequent to the initial attestation fulfil the specified requirements. The surveillance includes periodic assessment of the production process. This scheme does not provide any indication of the impact the distribution channel plays on conformity. When serious nonconformities are found, the opportunity may exist to resolve them before widespread market distribution occurs.
